Sponsorship Prospectus

Introduction

Paediatric Gastrointestinal Functional and Motility Disorders comprise some of the commonest conditions that afflict children worldwide with estimates of prevalence suggesting at least a third of infants and children will be affected with significant impacts on daily living and quality of life. At the most severe end of the spectrum gastrointestinal motility disorders are associated with some of the highest levels of morbidity and mortality seen in paediatric gastroenterology. Literally billions of dollars are spent on treatments, yet the evidence or efficacy for the use of such therapies are almost always lacking and there is a huge variability in practice. This further compounds problems in categorising, identifying and diagnosing such conditions. There is therefore an urgent need for developing global expertise in the field of paediatric neurogastroenterology and motility (PNM). Thankfully the last decade has not only seen considerable interest in the specialty apparent through increasing numbers of specialists involved in the field but unprecedented advances in genetics, technology and science. This has been manifest in an explosion in our understanding of the gut as a fundamental organ within the body with a whole host of functions and its intricate relationship with the microbiome, immune system and central nervous system amongst others.

About PNM 2021

The 1st ever World Conference in Paediatric Neurogastroenterology and Motility brings all these elements together on a global stage with expert speakers that lead in the field. The meeting aims to be truly multi and interdisciplinary involving professionals, drawn from across multiple disciplines, involved in the care of children suffering from gastrointestinal and nutritional conditions specifically with so-called gastrointestinal functional and motility.
